Perhaps no other single item so eloquently captures the vibrant spirit of tradition and progress that is the 20th century. Designed in 1907 by Augustus Saint-Gaudens, one of America's foremost sculptors, "Liberty" became an immediate classic and set the standard for coin designs the world over.

When the sale of American gold bullion coins resumed in 1986 after a 53-year hiatus, Saint-Gaudens' "Liberty" made her return, proof that beauty is indeed eternal.

Dear Eagle Collector,

Maintain the historical significance of your collection, and receive a specially commissioned art poster, if your order early.

If ever there was a year to own American Eagle Gold Proof Coins, 1999 is it. As the last series of American Eagles to be minted in the 1990s, the historical significance of this year's collection could make it one of the most desirable sets ever. That's why I'm urging you to order your 1999 American Eagle Four-Coin Set without delay.

As an added incentive, if you place an order of $150, or more, by June 15, 1999, you'll also receive a full-color, specially commissioned art poster at no additional charge. Secure yours today.

A set this important comes only once every thousand years.

As a serious collector, you know how much import and elegance American Eagles add to your collection. You recognize the historical importance of the 1999 coins. Yet with each passing day, your chance to add this historic set to your collection diminishes. There is no time to wait.

Her final appearance in the 1990s could be a very limited engagement.

Popularity alone is usually enough to command high Gold American Eagle sales. However, because these will be the last American Eagles issued in the 1990s, demand for this year's coins is bound to be even greater — increasing the likelihood of a sell-out before the December 31 ordering deadline. Many of our 1998 coin sets sold out early last year. Don't risk the historical integrity of your collection. Act now to secure your Four-Coin Set directly from the United States Mint.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Philip N. Diehl
Director
United States Mint
